

Merry Christmas

From the staff of Bad Eggs

Translator's Thanks

Okay! Here we have a little bit 'crashed' featured on a Ryōrei journal book. I hope you all enjoy. As for this time's disclaimer, this story was difficult in that there were a lot of bullet associated things for me to sort through. I'm not familiar with bullet in my own language, let alone Japanese, so there are bound to be some mistakes. Please send your feedback and comments to me at gingyokiblog@yahoo.com or post them on our forum.

Note: On page 22, there is a sign for the audition, but not the names of the participants. Unfortunately, I am not familiar with the things that make up the first names on the list, so it is a complete guess on my part as to what it really is. Since the girl in question is never mentioned, I don't think it's too grave of a change in my post. But if you feel otherwise, I'm sure I'll get a rather nasty email from you that I will look upon my wall and throw back at it!

Note: On page 25 (hereafter referred to as the undermaker page) I had even more issues with the sign. I cannot read handwritten things very well, so I had to make quite a few guesses here as well. "Students are welcome to watch" is a guess, as well as "Participants". If you are skilled at deciphering messy handwriting in Japanese, please message me to give me a better idea of what you think. And if you are not, please don't tell me for my reassurance.

(Not really necessary, since the problem with the things is already taken care of.)
